

MANAGEMENT

Plan. Organize. Take the lead. Offer to help. You may naturally be a good manager of your time, but developing additional management skills will help prepare you for your career. As a management major, you could find yourself working for a nationally recognized nonprofit organization, a large retailer, a family-owned business, or even a church. The options are unlimited. Good management skills benefit everyone.

side by side

- Our students know that good writing skills are necessary for success. So when the Accounting and Business Department set up The Writing Place to help its majors sharpen their skills, James Tyner '07 volunteered to help. A double major in management and economics, James worked with MC students on grammar, word usage, and content—reviewing papers and making suggestions.

academics that matter

Whether you major in management, accounting, general business, finance or marketing, you'll take the same core classes, giving you a taste of each. By the time you're in upper-level classes, you can narrow your focus to fit your specific career goal. You can double major or add a minor more easily, too, which gives you more options in the competitive job market.

SUCCESS

- Deb Allen '07, a double major in management and marketing, works in Warsaw, Ind., as a sourcer/assistant recruiter at Peoplelink Staffing.
- Mark Moon '08 is working on majors in accounting and management, and landed a summer internship with the Learn More Center in North Manchester, working with older adults who are pursuing a GED. On the second day, he found himself filling in for a teacher and loving the interaction and feedback. "It's been one of the most worthwhile jobs I've ever had," Mark said. "They look up to me, they joke with me; I've even been invited to BBQ's at their homes on the weekends."

I FOUND

... EXPERIENCE

In one semester, I made many friends from the United States and from different countries. My high school experience wasn't the best since I lived most of my life in the middle of a war zone. Sometimes we would go to school for a week and the next week stay at home because it was too dangerous. I love experiencing new cultures and new countries.

Manchester is a place I wanted to experience; it is a place far from my home, a place where you can see squirrels instead of tanks, and a place where you can hear birds instead of bombings.

Ibrahim Daqqaq '09, marketing major

Find your place.

Manchester College focuses on teaching management skills that will enhance any career. For more information or for a campus visit, call the Office of Admissions at 800-852-3648, e-mail admitinfo@manchester.edu or visit our website at www.manchester.edu. Choose Manchester College, where it's easy to find your place.

Visit findyourplace.manchester.edu

